

Your publication starts with six links.

CurEight is where people who know a subject publish what's worth reading on it. You choose six links and say how they connect. Your readers get each issue on the web and by email.

THE FORMAT

Every issue has three parts

- 01 The main points, up front
A TL;DR of what the six links say, so a reader knows what matters before opening one.
- 02 Six links, chosen by you
Articles, videos or podcast episodes on your subject. CurEight fills in each title, source and length.
- 03 An editorial that connects them
A short piece on what the six have in common and why each one is there. CurEight drafts it, and you make it yours.

Free to publish

Every curation is free to publish and free to read during early access.

Web and email

Readers follow you on the web and get each issue by email.

Your list is yours

Export your subscribers at any time.

A direct line

Send feedback, in the sidebar, reaches the team.

AC

Ada Chen
AI Signal · Weekly

Example issue

Reasoning models, and what changed this week

TL;DR
Three papers moved the same argument forward. Costs fell again, and the benchmarks measure less than their names suggest.

- Reasoning-per-dollar moves again
- Long-horizon tool use, tested PAYWALL
- Open-weight models close the gap
- What the new benchmarks measure
- Inference costs fall, and who that helps PAYWALL
- The case against scaling as a strategy

EDITORIAL
Read the first and the last together: one shows what the money buys, the other asks whether it should be spent.

1 TL;DR · 6 links · 1 editorial~26 min

GETTING STARTED

A first issue, in five steps

- ## 1 Accept your invitation

Your invitation email

Open the link in your invitation email and sign in. Your first sign-in creates your account.
- ## 2 Start a curation

Start a curation

Choose a subject, a name and how often you'll publish.
- ## 3 Add six links

New issue · Content

Paste the addresses, one or several at a time. CurEight fills in each title, source and length, and marks the links that need a subscription.
- ## 4 Make the draft yours

Editorial · TL;DR

CurEight drafts the title, the editorial and the TL;DR from your six links. Keep or rewrite each part until it says what you think.
- ## 5 Preview and publish

Save and preview

Check the preview, then publish now or schedule it. Each issue gets its own page to share, and your subscribers get it by email.

ONCE IT'S OUT

Bring your readers. Import a list, and each person gets one invitation to confirm.

See how each issue did. A summary arrives by email the day after you publish, and Numbers on your curation shows the rest.

Recommend other curators. Your picks appear on your curation's page.

GOOD TO KNOW

An issue is six links. The editor asks for all six before it publishes.

You sign off the draft. Each suggested part is kept or rewritten before it goes out.

General audiences. CurEight doesn't carry adult or graphic content.

Start at beta.cureight.xyz

The curator guide covers each step in detail, with answers to common questions.

beta.cureight.xyz/guide

Send feedback · in the sidebar